

2020 ANNUAL REPORT

End Meeting

The Warren Center is a nonprofit agency that advocates, serves and empowers the children and families impacted by developmental delays and disabilities.

MESSAGE FROM OUR CEO

One word comes to mind when I think about The Warren Center's 2020 fiscal year and that word is gratefulness. The past year has been both challenging and rewarding. While it has been quite a year, one that none of us will ever forget, I am confident that the past year has made The Warren Center a stronger organization.

The Warren Center is blessed with the most dedicated staff. We simply have the best employees, from our administrative staff who work behind the scenes to our front-line therapy providers. They are devoted, passionate, caring, resourceful, creative, and innovative individuals, who even in the most challenging times, go above and beyond for our clients and the community.

In March 2020, when COVID-19 cases began to rise in Dallas, we decided that the safest and healthiest choice for our families and staff was to start providing therapy through secure video conferencing, also known as teletherapy. Our staff jumped into action and in less than 48 hours, we were equipped with the tools necessary to serve our families virtually. In the six months that followed, we accomplished amazing feats including providing over 14,000 hours of teletherapy.

Many of the families we serve have been economically impacted by COVID-19. For families who have had a reduction or loss of family income, we are providing services free of charge. We primarily serve low-income families. These families have been significantly impacted by the downturn of the economy. If a family cannot pay rent, buy groceries, or access healthcare, helping their child to meet developmental milestones, while important, is often last on their list of priorities. As a result, our therapists and social workers are providing ongoing case management to the families. In addition to providing therapy, we helping them gain access to the resources they lack during the pandemic.

We could not accomplish all that we have and will continue to accomplish, without you. Thank you to our volunteers, including our dedicated Board of Directors who continues to advise The Warren Center during the crisis, generous donors, and community partners. We are so grateful to have your support as we continue to serve children and families impacted by developmental delays and disabilities.

Simply put, we cannot thank you enough.

ABOUT THE WARREN CENTER

Over fifty years ago, very few resources existed for parents of disabled children in Dallas County. With nowhere to turn for community-based services or help, families lacked support and their children had limited options in life. The Warren Center was created in 1968 and for decades, we have provided much-needed resources and care to children with disabilities and their families. Grassroots efforts and proven successes paved the way for an increase in community and parental awareness.

As our organization experienced growth, we began adapting our programs to meet the changing needs of families. Over the years, The Warren Center has given parents access to the resources their children needed, and more importantly, hope and support. We help children to reach their developmental goals through individualized therapy-based care and equip parents through monthly educational workshops and support groups so they can be confident advocates for their child.

Our Early Childhood Intervention (ECI) program for children age birth to three years old and Clinic Therapy Services for children age three to eight provides evaluations and personalized therapy sessions that include occupational and physical therapy, speech and language therapy, feeding and nutrition therapy, developmental therapy, and transition assistance to additional services.

We also help family's in our community with education and support services. These services equip families and caregivers through education, workshops, support meetings, and referrals to resources in the community.

IT'S BEEN QUITE THE YEAR

For millions of people, this statement encapsulates all of the tumultuous changes that have occurred in 2020. Social distancing, quarantine, and working from home have slowly transitioned into the new norm for most in the United States. However, there are some families who have experienced the challenges of quarantine even before the arrival of COVID-19.

One such example is Holland Brookins. Born at 27-weeks-gestation as a micro-preemie due to severe Intrauterine Growth Restriction (IUGR), she weighed only 1lb 7oz at birth. During her 4+ month NICU stay, Holland spent months intubated and on oxygen. Unable to drink on her own, she required a feeding tube for her entire hospital stay. In addition, she received a diagnosis of retinopathy of prematurity (ROP) and suffered a grade II brain bleed. She underwent heart surgery, had pneumonia twice, and suffered from a collapsed lung for an extended period of time.

Unfortunately, things took another turn for the worse when Holland spent a week diagnosed with severe periventricular leukomalacia (PVL), an injury to the white matter of the brain. But in a fortunate miracle that defied medical explanation, doctors reported that her brain scans began to look completely normal only a week after the PVL diagnosis. As a precaution, medical professionals continued to administer weekly head ultrasounds to monitor any brain bleeding.

After a stay of 129 days in the NICU unit of the hospital, Holland came home. As first-time parents, Destiny and Teddy felt nervous and concerned about Holland's care and development. They immediately enrolled their daughter into The Warren Center's Early Childhood Intervention program. Although she was about four months old, her adjusted age was only one month. She demonstrated delays in adaptive, social, motor, and cognition skills.

The Warren Center began working one-on-one with Holland. Her therapist, Nora Chavez, cleared the runway for Holland's development to take off. In the beginning, Holland struggled to open her fists, roll to her side, and hold her head up. It was hard for Holland to track objects or turn her head from side to side, and she made very few sounds (beyond crying for her bottle).

Before Holland's therapy could make any further progress, the unexpected COVID-19 pandemic hit the United States. Doctors considered Holland immunocompromised after being discharged from the NICU and the family had already been quarantined for flu season since their return home in October – conducting in-home therapy in a controlled environment.

After nearly five months of in-person therapy, COVID-19 meant that one-on-one in-person therapy services were suddenly no longer an option. Fortunately, The Warren Center transitioned Holland to teletherapy without delay. Holland's therapy schedule didn't miss a beat and allowed her to maintain the consistency necessary for her development and continued progress.

Furthermore, laptop time with her therapist Nora became an exciting part of Holland's routine. From check-ins on weekly therapy assignments to answering questions to celebrating crucial developmental milestones, Nora has been able to connect with the parents without disruption.

Holland now holds objects, rolls over, holds her bottle, scoots, crawls, climbs, and babbles like a chatterbox. Even more, the therapy sessions have given Holland's parents peace of mind, increased their confidence, and provided the resources and knowledge that enables their daughter to thrive.

The Warren Center will continue to provide professional evaluations, therapy services, and support to children impacted by developmental delays and disabilities. While it has been quite a year, Holland is a tremendous example of how your support continues to help children reach their full potential.

ANNUAL OPERATING EXPENSES

FY 2020 - Sources of Revenue

FY 2020 - Uses of Revenue

In March 2020, the World Health Organization recognized the novel strain of coronavirus, COVID-19, as a pandemic and recommended containment and mitigation measures worldwide. The coronavirus outbreak has caused business disruption through mandated closings of non-essential businesses and severely restricted the level of economic activity. The Warren Center has adjusted operational plans to protect the employees and individuals served while still meeting client and family needs for essential services. The Warren Center continues to closely monitor the impact of COVID-19 on all aspects of its business. Given the uncertainty of the spread and duration of the coronavirus, the related financial impact to the organization, if any, cannot be determined at this time. In response to economic uncertainty associated with the pandemic, the Organization has applied for or has taken advantage of temporary programs designed to provide economic relief to small businesses.
